4TH BURNED BODY FOUND

5 For the fourth time in about a month, a burned body was found in Massachusetts. Authorities on Tuesday were investigating a body that was discovered burned in Milton early Tuesday morning. According to the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, a passerby spotted a fire under a footbridge on Blue Hill Avenue on the Mattapan border. When authorities arrived on the scene, they determined that there were human remains in the fire. The location is known as a hangout spot for homeless people. NATE HOGAN

Trash fish — what's in a name?

Chefs say buzz needed to get diners eating lesser-known breeds.

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroBOS
spencer.buell@metro.us

"Trash Fish." Would you eat it?

It's a two-word buzz-inducing phrase that covers all the ocean's under-loved varieties: the hake and redfish and dogfish of the world that are plentiful off New England's coasts, yet so often ignored.

The many Boston-area experts who spoke with Metro agree: For a sustainable fishery future, area diners need to broaden their palates and eat more than just the staples like haddock and cod. But is "trash fish" the title these oceanic underdogs need to make it to the mainstream?

"We wanted it to be provocative," said Alisha Fowler of the Cambridge-based Chefs Collaborative, which hosts "trash fish dinners" to promote the lesser-known breeds. "We're not trying to say they're like trash, or unworthy. But just the fact that they're cast aside and treated like they're

More than 50 chefs have led "trash fish dinners" of their own, she said.

Michael Leviton, who owns Newton restaurant Lumiere, for one, embraces the term.

A frequent fish-tasting event host, he said he always puts at least one so-called "trash fish" on his ever-changing menu, depending on the day's catch. He teaches sustainability and cooking courses at BU. He's shopping around a proposal for a "trash fish" book.

"Consumers are not all of a sudden going to ask for this stuff unless they're exposed to it somehow," he said. "If we as chefs don't do that, then we're screwed."

Without change, the threat to fishing — and its role in the regional Provocative it has been. Since 2013, it's caught the attention of the culinary community around the country.

culture and economy — is real, said Elizabeth Fitzsimons, outreach manager for the sustainable seafood program at the New England Aquarium. The aquarium has partnered with the Chefs Collaborative on the issue. "New England Fisheries have been challenged," Fitzsimons said. But the "trash fish" moniker may be the wrong approach, given how attached diners in Boston and elsewhere are to their old favorites, fish industry folks told Metro.

"Underutilized or underappreciated might be a better name," said Jim Turner, owner of Turner's Seafood. "For centuries we ate cod and haddock and that's what we liked, and so breaking those habits has not been easy."

"We grew up on the nice fish," said Doug Feehey, a fisherman from Chatham. He said he's been trying to stoke the local market for dogfish, which are popular overseas but not in New England. "You're trying to sell it to people and you call it 'trash fish?' Do you really think it's going to take off?"

Norovirus suspected at

The chain also has been battling an E. coli outbreak elsewhere in the country.

Eighty Boston College students fell ill after eating at a Chipotle Mexican Grill restaurant this past weekend, and early test results point to the highly contagious norovirus as the culprit, public health investigators said on Tuesday.

Chipotle, already grappling with a multi-state E. coli outbreak that has battered the burrito chain's sales and stock price, has temporarily closed the Cleveland Circle restaurant where the Boston College students reported eating.

The students are being tested for E. coli and norovirus, which both can cause severe vomiting and diarrhea. Those test results are not expected for at least two days, a university spokesman said.

Chipotle on Tuesday said it would not shutter any other outlets in the Boston area.

"The pattern here looks like norovirus isolated to one restaurant," Chipotle spokesman Chris Arnold told Reuters.

The chain has been under a microscope since Oct. 31, when it was first linked to an E. coli outbreak that has sickened 52 people in nine states.

That outbreak was the company's third food safety incident since August. It has raised concerns about potential reputational damage to the fast-growing brand that has won a loyal following for its food made with fresh produce, meats raised without antibiotics and ingredients that are free of genetically modified organisms, or GMOs.

In August, Norovirus was blamed for sicken-

Help Metro make magic

Please donate to the Metro Magic annual holiday toy drive during the 2015 holiday season.

In keeping with the holiday spirit of giving, Metro is once again launching Tony's Metro Magic, our annual toy drive for underprivileged children in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

This year marks the seventh anniversary of the toy drive, which was renamed in memory of the man who oversaw the project for more than four years, Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-running editor-in-chief. Metcalf passed away in 2013 from colon cancer at the age of 50.

Metcalf lit up every year as he saw the faces of children unwrap their holiday gifts. It is our goal to keep that magic alive. We are now asking readers to contribute what they can to Tony's Metro Magic.

Metro has created a wish list at the Target website that readers can access by going to www.metro.us and clicking on the Tony's Metro Magic logo.

From there, just choose the toys you wish to donate, pay online using Target's secure payment system. Your gifts, along with your name attached, will be delivered to Metro's offices in each city.

This season we hope you will remember the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have gifts to open. Even one small gift can make a big difference in a child's holiday season.

The caps on the interest rate are 2.00% annually and 6.00% over the life of the loan. All loans are subject to credit approval. Bank NMLS ID #441396.

'Walking Dead' fan bites Norman Reedus

Being one of the stars of the world's biggest zombie drama, he really should've seen this coming. Norman Reedus was just enjoying a perfectly normal meet-and-greet photo session at a Walker Stalker convention — and clearly the name should've been a tip-off, too — when one particularly excited fan decided to lean in and try to take a bite out of his chest. Police and security stepped right in before any serious damage could be done, though. While the fan's teeth definitely made contact with flesh, Reedus decided not to press charges because it was "only a nibble" and didn't break the skin, according to E! News. But still, the woman was kicked out and has since been banned from all future Walker Stalker cons and events where Reedus is in attendance. Did anyone suggest a head shot just to be sure?

Jared Leto caves to irate Taylor Swift fans

Those T-Swift fans can be tough, so be careful crossing them. At least, that's what Jared Leto has learned after a video from a few months ago of him listening to some Swift tracks for the first time and not being too impressed leaked online. "Oh, I don't like this at all. Next," he says while listening to "Welcome to New York." And though he had some nicer — if tepid — things to say about "Blank Space," the video ends with him declaring, "F— her. I don't give a f— about her." But apparently he does now, since her measured and totes reasonable fans mounted an online offensive against the "Dallas Buyers Club" star. Within hours of the video going viral, Leto tweeted, "The truth is I think Taylor Swift is amazing and an incredible example of what's possible. If I hurt her or her fans, my sincerest apologies."

Ava DuVernay's Barbie is the new Tickle Me Elmo

If you're one of the fans excited about the new Ava DuVernay Barbie, sorry — they're all sold out. The dolls inspired by the "Selma" director hit the Internet yesterday and were snatched up within a half hour. The doll, originally not for purchase, was created in April as part of Mattel's "Sheroes" collection, but fans loved it so much that Mattel decided to roll it out just in time for the holidays. "People have really been talking about why they are embracing this doll, but it's certainly not about me. It's about the image. That's what they're responding to," DuVernay tells BuzzFeed. Proceeds from the doll go to two of DuVernay's favorite charities, Color of Change and Witness.

The women of 'Star Wars'

JENNA BUSCH

Geek Girl in Hollywood

Jenna Busch takes on the way pop culture snubs its female fans. For more columns, visit Metro.us/jenna-busch as well as her site, Legion of Leia (Legionofleia.com)

Last weekend, I was lucky enough to attend the press day for "Star Wars: The Force Awakens," J.J. Abrams' take on the series. This time around, we're getting a lot more women in "Star Wars," and I want to give you a taste of what they said about their roles, the film and girl power.

Carrie Fisher talked about being one of the first kick-ass women onscreen. "I am the beginning of girl power. Deal with it! I got to be the only girl on the all-boys set. It was really fun to put things in their drinks and stuff like that," she said. "Of course, we drank through the whole [original] trilogy! This was a sober set, so that's what J.J. brought: sobriety!"

And Leia still isn't afraid to stand up to men. "She takes on the physical power and screams at them until they pass out," Fisher said. "Trust me, I make fun of them. That was what was really fun about doing anything girl power-esque — was bossing the men around. I know a lot of you women out there haven't done that yet, and I encourage you to do so. Try it this afternoon."

Oscar winner Lupita Nyong'o, who plays Maz Kanata, told the crowd that despite her character being created through motion capture, Abrams had her on set for principle photography. "The thing that attracted me to doing motion capture

[was] the idea of working on a character that wasn't limited to my physical circumstances," Nyong'o said.

Daisy Ridley, who plays Rey, one of the new batch of heroes, talked about having a role model — and becoming one herself. "Well, obviously Princess Leia was a role model for girls across the years, and I'm definitely not there yet," Ridley said. "But I think Rey will be something of a girl power figure. ... She's brave and she's vulnerable and she's nuanced. ... It just so happens that she's woman. She transcends gender. She's going to speak to men and women."

Gwendoline Christie will bring something entirely new to the "Star Wars" franchise. She plays Captain Phasma, the series' first screen villain, and it doesn't matter that she's a she. "The response from the audience and the fans has been so celebratory, it makes me think that this is the kind of thing that people want to see," Christie told the crowd. "People want to see a more diverse reflection of society. And I feel incredibly privileged to play that part."

May the Force be with you.

Daisy Ridley plays Rey, one of the new female characters in "The Force Awakens," which opens Dec. 18. LUCASFILM

Decorate with Pantone's colors of the year

LOVE WHERE YOU LIVE

How to use them

If you want to use both, incorporate neutrals and deeper hues to avoid looking dated. "Serenity and Rose Quartz are very similar in tone so I could see pairing these with a bolder hue, like a deep cocoa or charcoal, and a pale canvas like a chilly white," says Donelson. "Those neutrals would do a nice job of taking the sweetness factor down a notch."

Rose Quartz and Serenity are a soothing, gentle departure from years past. Here's how industry experts see the shades in your home.

MONICA WEYMOUTH
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

What will 2016 look like? According to the Pantone Color Institute, a puff of cotton candy.

For the first time in its history, the New Jersey-based firm has awarded two shades its coveted "Color of the Year" title: Rose Quartz (a light, dusty pink) and Serenity (its blue counterpart).

After years of bolder, richer selections, the soft hues are almost jarring, but they've been slowly been sneaking onto runways and into photo shoots for months. Sophie Donelson, editor in chief of House Beautiful, wasn't surprised by the change of direction. "I've been seeing a lot of designers use what I call 'sea glass' hues — gentle washes of color — to create rooms that reveal themselves over time," she says. "It's not about garnering a whiz-bang reaction, but developing a palette that's peaceful without being sleepy."

Interior designer Tara Mangini, co-owner of New York-based boutique firm Jersey Ice Cream Co., already knows her way around Rose Quartz. "We used a pink couch on a project last year, and then did a pink plaster kitchen on the next, and I totally loved both," she says. "Years ago I wanted to paint my apartment pink and everyone scoffed at me, so I feel like this is my moment of redemption."

As for Serenity, well, if you're having trouble imagining your junior prom gown trending, you're not alone. But according to Mangini, it's probably only a matter of time. "Serenity, I'm not so hot on," she says. "But I read some quote by Yoko Ono about how she was really into pink for her last project, and now is obsessed with blue. So I'll be loving blue a year or two from now."

NFL power rankings | by Luke Miller

No. 1

Panthers (12-0)

The Panthers survived both of their closest calls this season on Sunday when they overcame the Saints' fast start and Cam Newton passed the concussion protocol. Only Atlanta, the Giants and Tampa Bay stand between Carolina and an undefeated regular season.

No. 4

Bengals (10-2)

The Bengals' remaining schedule includes what looks like two easy victories — San Fran and Baltimore — and two games of monumental importance. The first, next week at home, could bury the Steelers. The second, on Dec. 28 in Denver, could decide home field in the AFC.

No. 6

Chiefs (7-5)

The Chiefs are the reverse Falcons. During Kansas City's win streak, Jeremy Maclin has blossomed into exactly the receiving threat the Chiefs desperately needed when they signed him. Their remaining schedule makes 11-5 an equally realistic and amazing outcome for this season.

No. 8

Steelers (7-5)

This offense is nutty good, and apparently doesn't even need Le'Veon Bell to be dominant. DeAngelo Williams is averaging a full yard more per carry than Jonathan Stewart back in Carolina. Next week comes Pittsburgh's last stand in the division, against Cincy.

No. 10

Vikings (8-4)

That was one ugly loss to the Seahawks. Only a second-half kickoff return by Cordarrelle Patterson got the Vikings on the scoreboard. That said, this is what will happen to the offense when the Vikings fall behind early and Adrian Peterson gets only, say, eight carries.

Broncos (10-2)

Denver's defense is still playing lights out (as it has for most of the season) and Brock Osweiler is the game manager they need to get wins out of their play. The looming showdown between the Broncos and Bengals is looking more and more like it will decide home-field advantage in the AFC.

Cardinals (10-2)

No Chris Johnson? No Andre Ellington? No problem. The Cardinals still ran for 175 yards on their way to 524 yards and a complete dismantling of one of the only two teams to beat them all this season. And they only allowed 212 yards. Man, this team is balanced.

No. 5

Patriots (10-2)

Sunday's home loss to Philly was the first definite proof that Tom Brady can't do it all on his own. With New England down a few strings on offense, receivers were breaking off routes and dropping passes Sunday, but mostly they were putting the Patriots' march to home-field advantage in serious doubt.

'Hawks (7-5)

Throw this column on the pile that may have prematurely buried the defending NFC champions. With recent wins over the Steelers and Vikings, the latter in absolutely dominant fashion, the Seahawks have proven that yes, they can beat really good teams. They're getting hot at the right time.

No. 9

Packers (8-4)

I know. How far is it fair to drop a team for actually winning? But last week's win over Detroit was another uninspiring performance by the Packers until Aaron and Richard Rodgers contributed some magic at the end. They face the Cowboys, Raiders and Cardinals in the next three weeks.

No. 11

Jets (7-5)

Ryan Fitzpatrick sure looks capable of putting a team on his shoulders this season. The Jets are a different team with him at QB, and what he brings was on display in the fourth quarter and OT against the Giants. Brandon Marshall has done all the right things this season as well.

Aries Prepare for the festive season. Financial gains look promising, with many contracts, settlements and winnings heading your way.

Taurus Make a point to share your thoughts. The support you receive and the input that's offered will give you the momentum you need.

Gemini Take on a challenge, but don't underestimate any opponent you face. Positive change is heading your way. Prove that you are responsible.

Cancer Getting together with old friends or reminiscing about the past will spark new enthusiasm and lead to the revival of hobbies.

Leo Being productive will make you look good and help you avoid troublesome emotional encounters. Listen to the voice of experience.

Virgo You should delay making a decision if you have doubts about the situation. It's better to be safe than to appease someone.

Libra Taking a trip or expanding your knowledge will spark interest in an unusual vocation. Consider your options and money-making ideas.

Scorpio Don't be afraid to be different. It's your special way of doing things that attracts interest and attention. Romance should take top priority.

Sagittarius Rumors will circulate if you haven't been honest with someone. Caution must be taken while traveling with authoritative individuals.

Capricorn You will feel relieved and in the mood to celebrate with someone you love once the work is done. Plan something lavish.

Aquarius Size up your situation and make decisions based on your findings. Don't let your emotions lead you down the wrong path.

Pisces You'll have a creative way of dealing with personal matters. Your actions will play important roles. Love should take precedence. EUGENIA LAST
